

Support for community-led housing projects.

Houses made by the people who live in them create better homes and stronger places.

Many people across the Thames Valley do not have access to good quality, secure and affordable housing. While lots of housing development is underway, owning a new home will remain largely out of reach for many. This is particularly the case for younger people, single-person households and households earning an average income. Rental prices are also going up and up.

Collaborative Housing provides hands-on advice, from exploring the possibilities through to the practicalities of funding, design and planning.

At Collaborative Housing we think communities themselves are best placed to identify their local housing needs. We want to encourage and support communities to find solutions to their housing needs themselves.

Get involved!

Are you interested in starting a community-led housing project where you live? Are you a landowner or home-owner who might be interested in working with a community-led housing group? Please get in touch with Fiona Brown to see how we can help by calling 01865 883 488 or emailing fiona@cohub.org.uk

From co-housing and community land trusts to co-operative and self-help housing, we support all kinds of community-led approaches. The benefits are many, from genuinely affordable homes to more cohesive communities, improved well-being and tackling the climate emergency.
